Black Family Reunion
A large number of the black family of the city gathered at the home of Mrs. J. H. Smith, 1111 North Third St., for a reunion. The occasion was the anniversary of the death of the late Mr. J. H. Smith, who died on July 1, 1913. The reunion was held in the evening and was attended by about 50 persons. The program consisted of a dinner, a musical program, and a social hour. The dinner was served by the ladies of the family and was a most delicious one. The musical program was given by the children of the family and was most enjoyable. The social hour was held in the parlor and was most enjoyable. The reunion was a most successful one and was a most enjoyable occasion for all who attended.

JACOBS CREEK.

JACOBS CREEK, July 22.—All the Pittsburg colliers from Layton to West Newton worked six days last week.

Over three hundred persons witnessed the ball game between Jacobs Creek and Osborn Saturday evening, July 18th, at Jacobs Creek which was won by the latter after ten innings of hard playing. The game stood 4 to 1 in Osborn's favor in the ninth inning with two men out and two strikes called on the third. After Sokel batted a ball between B. and second which was too hard to handle and advanced a runner to third and put Sokel on first; the cheering started. Wardley stepped up to the plate and made a three-bagger, sending two men across the plate and trotted home a few seconds later with the run that tied the score. Such cheering and blowing of horns never was heard on these grounds before. The next batter was an easy out. Osborn was retired in the next inning by Sokel striking out the first two batters and an infield fly. Jacobs Creek took the bat and a base hit and a two-base hit gave them the game by a score of 5 to 4 with none out when the winning run was made. James struck out nine men and Sokel two. Burle of Osborn, struck out five men.

C. C. Kimes, U. & O. station agent at Dawson, and his mother, of this place, left Saturday on a trip and will visit the following places before returning home: Kane, Pa.; New York City, Niagara Falls, Detroit, Mich., and Chicago, Ill.

TAFETTA FOR AFTERNOONS.

The latest news from the French capital informs us that taffeta is the favorite of all materials intended for afternoon gowns. That of newest manufacture is so soft and pliable that it is admirably adapted for the puffs and drapery of modern frocks. It is, however, also used for the plainer frocks and semi-tailored suits. The gown in the drawing is of taffeta covered buttons. The blouse in bolero effect, the upper portion of the sleeve being cut in one piece with the same bolero which falls over the high collar and is trimmed with taffeta-covered buttons. In the back the same effect is produced, but with a single broad table at the center. The little vest is of dull blue silk with red stripes, the rolling collar and girdle of plain blue taffeta.

A BRIGHT COLORED ROCK FOR A CHILD OF TEN.

The quaint and cozy and value of the so many women who have introduced the flocks of the younger generation. The little Ellen H. model shown in this drawing was of cream color with little bright colored homogeneity of dress to attract over its surface. The simple little peasant blouse has a collar of lace and is closed at the center front with a button of silk. The waist line is high and the skirt is joined to the blouse under a such of narrow colored mossline. The skirt is lined on either side over the hip and is pulled into a band of moss-colored silk at the bottom. The color of this matching the skirt.

W. H. Macbeth, a prominent citizen of West Altoona, was in town on Tuesday.

Mr. H. B. Hartman and her mother Mrs. Jackson, who is visiting her from Richmond, Va., spent a couple of days in Pittsburg this week.

TOO MANY COAL MINES.

Workmen in Illinois Starving Because Trade Is So Slow.

SPRINGFIELD, O., July 22.—Duncan McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Mine Workers' union, states that a desperate condition exists in the coal mining industry. 10,000 out of the 30,000 members of the organization in the state are out of work because of the overabundance of the coal industry in the state. Many of these miners are on the verge of starvation as there is not enough money in the relief fund to supply them. Eighteen mining companies failed last year in the state. Too many mines are being opened.

TO BUILD BIG TUNNEL.

Order Placed for Steel to Be Used at Big Kentucky Mine.

EVANSVILLE, Ind. July 21.—Orders have been placed for steel to be used in the construction of the $250,000 Apple at Henderson, Ky., by the Deep Water Coal Co. Manager H. P. Allen is quoted as saying that the company is capitalized at $100,000 and that an equal amount of bonds at 5 per cent none of which are on the market, have been issued.

The company with its 210,000 acres of coal land, most of which is in Kentucky, is said to control the largest field in the world.

MOUNT PLEASANT

MOUNT PLEASANT, July 22.—Mr. and Mrs. Victor Maymunt entertained so little girls in honor of Mrs. Catharine's fifth birthday. Mrs. Maymunt was assisted by Mrs. Mae Crusan and Reverend and Mrs. Harper. Games were played and refreshments served. Just before they started for home Robert Goodman took their photo.

The young people of the Otterbein Guild will hold a lawn party from 3 to 10 o'clock on the rear of the United Brethren Church lot on Friday evening.

Thomas Cort is carrying mail in the first ward during the time that Milton S. Barnhart is taking his vacation. Erna 1847 do in the silver line and "Blair" or "Waltham" do in the watch business.

Mr. Smith M. Birkel is at Boston, Mass., visiting her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Birkel. August Speller, the Post End hotel man, mailed the first of the week for Germany taking with him his two sons who he will put in school there.

Balance of Week

AS A GREAT MANY PEOPLE WHO COULD NOT BE WAITED ON WERE DISAPPOINTED, I HAVE DECIDED TO CONTINUE THIS WONDERFUL OFFER AND FOR THE BALANCE OF THIS WEEK ONLY I WILL FIT YOUR EYES WITH "STEVENS S. Q." GOLD-FILLED EYE GLASSES FOR $1.00. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED. PLEASE REMEMBER I AM DOING THIS TO BUILD UP A BIG BUSINESS COME EARLY IN THE MORNING AND EARLY IN THE EVENING AND YOU WILL BE SURE TO GET WAITED ON. OFFICE HOURS 9 A. M. TO 6 P. M.

This "Stevens" offer is an advertising proposition pure and simple—your advantage is a superior grade of goods at a special low price—my profit is making 600 new acquaintances and winning their confidence.

Stevens mountings are the best in the world—they occupy the same position in the optical trade as "Rogers" does in the silver line and "Blair" or "Waltham" do in the watch business.

SUCH A STARTLING ANNOUNCEMENT no doubt makes you ask if it is absolutely genuine and if so, why I do it. The whole story is this: I have decided to make this unheard-of sacrifice of gold-filled glasses at $1 to gain the full support and patronage of Connellsville people and thus build up an extensive optical business. The lenses are the same I use in my regular lines, every one fully guaranteed, and I use just as much care in fitting your eyes. Difficult cases a specialty.

Headaches and nervousness and other troubles, far more than the eye are often the direct result of eye strain and the proper glasses would give immediate relief. It is not necessary for the eye to be sore to indicate the need of glasses. In many cases the eye may be perfectly healthy and glasses may be needed for the reasons which are only apparent to the skilled refractician.

During this wonderful offer I will be in charge and every patient will get scientific examination and glasses properly adjusted. REMEMBER I am making this offer to build up my business and cannot afford to exaggerate. Special prices during the offer on specially ground lenses, bifocals and torics.

For balance of week only "Stevens S. Q." Gold filled Bifocals Mountings—every pair guaranteed by the makers—fitted with my own lenses—including examination, $1.00. All "Stevens" frames and mountings are stamped on the bridge—"Stevens S. Q."—look for it—don't take my word. They are gold filled—not gold plated—permanently guaranteed by Stevens & Company, (Inc.) of Providence, R. I., and myself—and will be replaced at any time if they fail to give satisfaction.

Caution about the Use and Selection of Spectacles.
Persons having normal vision will be able to read this print at a distance of 10 to 15 feet with ease and comfort. But if you are unable to read it with ease and comfort, you will need spectacles. When the eyes are diseased, they must be treated first. It is a sure indication that glasses are needed. The lenses must be of the proper curvature and have perfectly formed surfaces. Continued use of defective lenses will result in permanent injury to the eyes and strain upon the muscles of accommodation to supply the defects in the lenses.

$50 REWARD

I have no agents and will pay the above reward for the arrest and conviction of persons attempting to be me or my representative.

VILLA'S VOICE
WINS VICTORYRebel General's Influence With Soldiers Is Wonderful.

THEY FIGHT LIKE DEMONS

At Command of Chief Troops Sweep At Before Them; Likened to Scatter Chief Whose "One Blast of Bugle Horn Was Worth a Thousand Men."

Jimmy Hare, an American newspaper photographer, returned to El Paso from Torreon, where he witnessed the battle of Zacatecas, says an El Paso dispatch to the New York American. Of General Villa and the battle of Zacatecas Hare said:

"Villa has been compared with Grant and Lee and Washington and Napoleon and other famous warriors, but after seeing him in action at Zacatecas and seeing the effect of his presence upon his soldiers I am more inclined to liken him to Roderick Dhu, the famous Scottish chieftain, of whom it is said, 'One blast of his bugle horn was worth a thousand men.'"

"When Villa arrived upon the scene at Platanillo, an outpost of Zacatecas, and gave the order for an attack in force upon the almost impregnable positions occupied by the federalists his soldiers became demons rather than men and fought their way over seemingly insurmountable obstacles. Three hours later they had not only captured the city and all it contained, including munitions of war, but destroyed an army almost equal to their own in number."

Hills Covered With Dead.
"The carnage was something frightful. The surrounding hills were literally covered with dead, and bodies of men and horses lay in heaps in the streets of the city, where they were mowed down by machine gun fire as the panic stricken federalists attempted to seek safety in flight."

"After being driven into the city and finding that it could not hold it General Barron's army attempted to get away to the southwest through the pass leading to Laguna de Guadalupe, and here it was that the greatest loss of life was sustained."

"In the tortuous six miles of narrow canyon which constitutes the road from the southern gateway of Zacatecas to Guadalupe the bodies of between 2,600 and 3,000 horses and between 3,300 and 4,000 men were found."

"The disposition of this great mass of carnage before it began to rot, and the cause of an epidemic of disease was in itself a stupendous task as it was a gruesome task. Nearly the entire Constitutionalist army, or at least that portion of it not required in similar effort on other portions of the battlefield and not including those sent in pursuit of the few federalists, was put at work at burying and burning the bodies. Great quantities of lime were used in order to cause quick disintegration and at the same time disinfection."

"The mountains around and about the city of Zacatecas are honeycombed with mine openings of all sorts, and many federalists, finding escape cut off, sought refuge in shafts, pits and tunnels in the surrounding hills. The Con-stitutionalists, suspecting that the mines would be used as places of refuge, searched the district promptly after the order was given to cease firing, and thousands of prisoners were captured in this manner."

Praise for Hospital Service.

"Other parties who had succeeded in cutting their way were overtaken and either captured or killed if they put up a fight."

Of the loss in killed and wounded sustained by the Constitutionalist Mr.
Hare said that he could not talk intelligently because of the lack of facts and figures on which to base a statement.

He was loud in his praise of General Villa's hospital service and said the wounded on both sides were given splendid care as rapidly as they could be brought to the hospital trains while the battle was in progress or to the hospitals in Zacatecas after the occupation.

WHY RICH BUTTER IS YELLOW

Due to Carotin in Cow's Rations, Says Department of Agriculture.

The rich, yellow color demanded by the public in dairy products has been shown to be due primarily to the nature of cow food. This announcement was made by the department of agriculture as the result of experiments carried on in co-operation with the Missouri state experiment station.

The department's conclusion is that, although to some extent a breed characteristic, the intensity of this yellow color may within certain limits be increased or diminished at will by changing the cow's rations.

Chemical tests show that the yellow color in milk is produced by several well known pigments found in green plants, the principal one being carotin, so called because it constitutes a large part of the coloring matter of carrots.
The other yellow pigments in milk are known as xanthophylls. These are found in a number of plants, including grass, but are especially abundant in yellow autumn leaves.

This explains the fact that fresh, green grass and carrots increase the yellowness of butter. Green grass, it is stated, is probably richer in carotin than any other dairy feed and cows feeding on it produce the highest colored butter.

Paid With Interest.

In Burroughs' "Travels in America in 1730" the following incident is related:
The captain of a British man-of-war cruising off the Massachusetts coast lost his wife in Boston. On one of his visits to port she came down to the deck to meet him, and she was publicly kissed by her loving spouse. This violation of the law was at once reported, and the captain was brought before the magistrate and sentenced to be publicly whipped. There was no getting out of it, and the captain submitted quite gracefully.

Just before the departure of his ship he gave to elaborate entertainment to which all of the magistrates were invited. After the festivities were over and every one had shaken hands with the captain and was going over the side the magistrates were seized by the arm and stripped to the waist.
Each one was led to the gangway, where a vigorous backwash gave him thirty-nine lashes on the bare back, and then hustled him over into a boat, amid the cheers of the whole ship's company.

"Curing" Diseases.

"What is a cure?" asks the editor of the London Lancet in reproving doctors for the loose way in which they use the word. "Nothing ever gets completely well," is an aphorism of a great medical philosopher.

Only when the cause of a diseased condition has been removed, its effects neutralized and the organism protected against its activities in the future have we the right to speak of the "cure" of the patient, is the editor's opinion. Immunity conferred by such a cure, he says, may be only temporary.
"Where a disease process is only limited or shut off and its further spread prevented, while the causal agent remains, we should speak of arrest, but not of cure. Where grave organic damages have occurred and function has been restored by vicarious activities we should speak of the result as one of repair or compensation."

The Novelist Rebuked.

The late George Alfred Townsend (Gath) was lunching in New York one day when a novelist of the realistpeasant school began to growl about marriage.

Guilping his drink and bolting his boiled beef and cabbage, the novelist in a long harangue proved conclusively that marriage was a failure.

When he had finished Gath gazed at him calmly and said:
"I tell you what it is, Ed—when a man thinks marriage is a failure it's pretty blamed certain that his wife thinks so too."

Worsted.

It is stated that worsted was first spun at Worstead, Norfolk, England, in the year 1340. Stockings made of this material were at first very cheap and used by the poorer people. Shakespeare uses the word contemptuously in the phrase, "Worsted stocking knave,"— London Telegraph.

Delighting the Eye and the Ear.

"That pianist has remarkable hair."
"Yes," replied the theatrical manager. "He is one of the most compact proportions I know of. Not only does he provide his own music, but he carries his own scenery."—Washington Star.

Good
form

Calling on New Neighbors.

Usually the etiquette of calls is that those residing the longest in a town must pay the first call. This should be returned within a fortnight—just a short and formal call, with a calling card of a married woman and one of her husband left for each lady and an additional one of his for each man of the family. Quite often, however, in these informal days of the convenient telephone an evening is arranged for, where the first formal call may assume the less formal and pleasanter form of a purely social visit.

In small towns the calling is more extensive, and newcomers are welcomed more or less cordially very soon after arriving. The pastor of their church calls, and this is perhaps the best means of becoming acquainted, as a minister of the gospel requests his wife to call upon a new parishioner, and in this way the acquaintances of church members will soon be made.

After the more formal calling is done with a really friendly feeling arises, and the "strangers within the gates" is made to feel entirely at home. Then by judicious small "afternoons" and tea a woman becomes a favored and sought after hostess, with her "affairs" always well attended and with her own preferences at her command. Yet it should be remembered that it is better to be on the best of terms with all neighbors, and by attention to one's own business in the morning that a woman is not inclined to gossip or make mischief—this desired end is attained.

Street Etiquette.

It is not considered good form for a man to take hold of a lady's arm in walking at any time except to assist her in alighting from a vehicle or over a crossing or in some place where assistance is absolutely necessary.
In walking on the street during the day a man should walk beside the lady, preferably on the right hand, which will prevent her being jostled in meeting those going in the opposite direction, but always on the outside of the walk. He does not take her arm nor does she take his, unless, as said, for the purpose of assisting her in some way.

In the evening a lady may take the arm of the man she is walking with that he may be a support and that they may the better keep step, but he should not take hers. The exceptions are where a woman is feeble or aged, when any support and assistance that can be rendered should be done in the easiest and most inconspicuous fashion.

A Rose Luncheon.

A charming decoration for a lunchon is a big central basket or birch bark filled with white garden roses.
The leaves may fall over the edge of the basket on to the cloth to form a border.

At the four corners have tall glass or silver vases filled with pink and white roses and drooping border of leaves.
The cakes and bonbons may be white and pink.

Serve the dessert in tall sherbet glasses, with the stems twined with vines and a border of flowers around the edge of the plate. One plate can have a wreath of the white roses and another of the pink and thus alternate around the table.

Serve the ices in the heart of rose cups twined with vines, and on one side of the plate have a spray of roses, alternating a white flower with one of pink.

Conversation at Meals.

Children should be taught to talk at meals. So often it happens that one or two members of a family get into a way of monopolizing all the conversation, while the others sit silent.

Every one ought to contribute to the general amusement. If children are taught to notice and remember little interesting things that happen throughout the day they very soon form a habit of doing their part.

The man or woman who has nothing to say acts as a wet blanket at any party, and nobody wants a wet blanket.

Never have an idle hour or an idle pound.—Old Saying.

World Noted Sculptors Produce Marvels In the Plastic ArtSuperb Decorative Statuary Fast Assuming Form at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition

PRODIGIOUS works of sculpture are now being completed in the sculptural warehouses of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition.
Many of them have already long been finished. The works are remarkable for their imagery and vigor and for the beauty of their conception.

Not for many years will the world be enabled to enjoy so marvelous a collection of the works of contemporary sculptors. The World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago first proved that the greatest talent might be employed to produce even work of temporary value. Since then more and more attention has been given at such succeeding exposition to sculpture as a form of decoration, and now the Panama-Pacific International Exposition promises to surpass even Chicago's exquisite display.

Viewing the superb groups and individual pieces of statuary, the visitor feels like a Lilliputian who has been transported into a land of giants. Some of the great groups are of colossal dimensions. Many of these great pieces of statuary will adorn huge triumphal arches and when so placed will seem of natural size to the visitor who stands upon the floors of the exposition courts.

We present upon this page some classical examples of the sketch models and the enlarged figures. A number of America's foremost sculptors have been engaged in the production of these figures. Among the sculptors are many names widely known both in America and abroad. The list includes A. Stirling Calder, acting director of sculpture; Albert Jaegers, Enrico Piccirilli, Leo Lentelli, Robert L. Aitkin, Adolph A. Weinman, Isidoro Kouti, Evelyn Beatrice Longman, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Douglas Tilden, Gutzon Borglum, H. A. MacNeil, James E. Fraser, Charles C. Ramsey, Haig Patigian, Paul Manship, F. G. R. Roth, Charles Neuhaus, D. C. French, Herbert Adams and others.

The sculpture of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition will carry out the note of the exposition in celebrating the opening of the Panama canal.
The spirit of achievement as exemplified by America's work at Panama will be idealized.

When the sculptors began to plan their work they had as an inspiration an undertaking which has appealed to the imagination of the world for centuries.
In the opening of the Panama canal they saw the final result of four centuries of effort to secure a passageway between the oceans. The statuary will reproduce upon a wonderful scale the historic incidents connected with the Panama canal. Figures of the early explorers of the oceans, groups symbolizing the effort to pierce the rocky backbone of the continents, compositions designed to symbolize accidental and oriental themes, colossal representations of struggle and achievement, will illustrate many of the dramatic topics inseparably associated with the search for a passageway to the Pacific and with the final building of the canal at Panama.

In no other exposition has sculpture been employed to adorn the grounds to the extent that it will be employed at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

And while the sculptors are fast completing their splendid productions, which reveal the ideals of sculptors of the present day, other work upon the exposition is fast progressing. When the gates of this, America's Panama canal celebration, swing open to the world on Feb. 20, 1915, it will be upon a fully completed and perfected spectacle, the setting of the greatest international celebration that the world has ever beheld.

CHAPTER VII.

The Great American Dollar.

Jane always at the first check at the mail in their home. Bob left before the early delivery. He would have just as readily considered breaking into a letter box as he would opening anything addressed to her. So she had no fear on that score. If Brand chose to send her any communication concerning their business affairs she could rest doubly assured that her husband would have no knowledge of it. But there were other letters that it was just as well to keep from Bob. She never let herself believe that she was deceiving him. It was merely that she did not want to worry him with the petty details of the household cares. Tradersmen were so exacting and insistent about having the bills paid promptly and sometimes, in her plan of management, she found it convenient to let them wait. Jane knew that her husband was opposed to such tactics, but what could a woman with such a meager income as hers do? If the financing of the home was to be left to her—and Bob believed that was a woman's right—she was the one to judge. She was the one to decide about the "economies" and the necessary expediency in meeting debts.

Economy is a word that most women define in a very literal sense. There are some who are more frugal than others and who have an inherent faculty of making a little money go a long way. Jane considered herself of this class, but in reality her tastes and instincts were of the opposite order. She was not extravagant, for that would have been impossible, but her funds were so limited that "saving" from the household expenses simply meant postponing the inevitable. Reynolds had just about enough to make both ends meet and so, usually, when Jane "economized" she robbed Peter to pay Paul. It was becoming harder and harder, consequently, to make the debit and the credit sides of her account balance. The hat was the first serious example of her failure. That horrid old butler had insisted that in exchange for his chicken steaks and bones he was entitled to the equivalent and something more in regular American money. If it hadn't been for his greediness, she told herself, Bob would have been none the wiser and she would have come out all right in the end. Just exactly how, she did not attempt to explain.

Well, the butcher's underhanded tactics hadn't done him any good! He had his money, but he had lost a customer and her bill was always bigger than Mrs. Collins'. Oh, it was intolerable, but it was nearly over. When she had helped Bob up to where he belonged she would go around to that pig of a meat dealer, buy a porterhouse and tender him a fifty-dollar bill. Then, while he was making change, she would give the steak to Dick—a fox terrier Dick—and laudize if he had a better cut, one fit for her table. She would show these common Islanders that she was a born or bred to dabble in pennies or be chased by bills!

The visualization of this glorious revenge relieved her. She called Dick, took him in her lap and laughingly told him of the prospective feast. Dick had breakfasted on a single better cake so, no doubt, he found his mistress' plans most commendable. The postman's whistle recalled Jane to reality. She hurried to the door. There were four letters. Two were from tradesmen she recognized the handwriting on the third as that of a girl friend. The fourth was in a plain but expensive envelope. The address was typewritten and the letter bore a special delivery stamp. Her heart beat rapidly as she broke the seal. She drew out a folded sheet of heavy, lined stationery and as she opened it a yellow-back bill dropped to the floor. With a glad cry she stooped and picked it up. It was one hundred dollars. One hundred real American dollars all compressed into a little bit of paper; the first bill of that denomination she had ever seen, and it was all hers!

There was no writing on the folded paper. Not even a letterhead. It seemed to Jane that this was a bit of delicacy on Brand's part, but if he had known her thoughts at that moment one might have seen another of those rare and cynical smiles. The system has a way of doing such things. Good disciples of the creed do not write checks or even certificates of deposit unless the figures are for fabulous sums. And they do not ask receipts.

Also, Brand knew the lure of ready money. While he felt reasonably certain that the spider had stepped boldly into the web, he was too good a business man to not consider possibilities. He knew that at heart Jane was a loyal wife. Her quick revulsion when he had proposed stopping for refreshments revealed this. She might be weary of her frisking and handrum life, but who was not weary of her husband? Nor had she lost materially, he thought, any of those finer feelings of a real woman. That "I cannot have you interfere" had rankled and hurt, but the wound would heal. There was always the chance that her husband's presence, his devotion, his innocent trust would strike the chord of genuine sympathy that existed between them and bring a penitent confession to his feet. She was willing to worship at Mammon's altar, but eventually her husband must kneel beside her. Brand knew. He knew a pigmy and he knew a worthy foe. The burglar prowling in the night knows the watch-dog is loyal. He does not try cajolery with a soft whistle or kind words. He offers something more substantial—a bone with good gristle and a bit of meat.

That was Brand's bait—the bone, the gristle and not too much meat. Not enough to surfeit; just enough to gnaw on and leave the taste for more. Maybe, later when the taste had grown, when the bone seemed an unnecessary adjunct to the meat—well, time would tell.

With her hundred dollars tucked away in a safe place Jane sat down with pencil and paper to enumerate and dilate upon its purchasing power. There were so many things that she wanted and actually needed, yet she knew who must be guarded in her selections. Everything she bought would have to be accounted for as having been obtained through savings from her weekly allowance. And this would preclude the purchase of anything elaborate; anything that to the layman's eye would reveal its costliness. She must spread the money around here and there in comparatively small amounts.

But there must be a dress. That she would not be denied. She would have one made, her first tailored suit. It would take two or three weeks to get it and this would give her time to prepare for its arrival. Bob was no connoisseur on women's clothes and besides he never pressed her for details about her expenditures. He knew that she had wonderful taste and judgment though she had small opportunity for exercising it.

She took up the morning paper and scanned the ads. Lingerie. That was one solution. Men never could understand the cost of such bits of finery and how often she had looked for some of it. One of the stores, too, was advertising a special sale of broadcloth motoring coats with silk moire lining. Wouldn't that be grand for her business jaunts with Brand? But the price, sixty-eight dollars! That would never do. She would have to hide it as she had the hat and if Bob ever discovered it even his innocent credulity would be tasked to imagine that it was the fruit of household economy.

There were handsome silver purses with vanity cases. One of the kind she had wanted for a year. That would do for one thing. It was small and to a man would mean very little even if it was reduced from fifteen dollars to thirteen ninety-eight. Some tan suede ties to go with the new dress. Yes, they would be just the thing for the suit was going to be brown. She had worn that little old, blue serge, rellined it, changed the collar and altered it generally until she hated it and never wanted to see a piece of blue cloth again. The ties were six dollars, but she would have them, anyway. Bob wouldn't know whether they cost six or two. They were just what she wanted, too. She hated high shoes, although for Staten Island, and with winter coming, they were far more practical.

She thought of Bob, too. It seemed to Jane that he had worn that faded tan suit ever since she could remember. Poor Bob! She wished she could hurry over to New York, tell him about their good fortune and divide the hundred with him. Of course, that was out of the question, but he would come into his own in the end and, in the meantime, he should share her new found wealth to some extent. She would buy him something; handkerchiefs, hose and some neckwear. Christmas and birthdays were the only time he boasted such luxuries for he never bought them for himself.

Before she had finished with her list Jane found she had far exceeded the equivalent of her yellowback. She had thought it would be hard to plan the expenditure of so much money at one time but now, without even stepping inside of a store, she had thought of a score of purchases and she found it necessary to prune and strike off half the articles she wanted.

She longed to go over and break the news of her good fortune to Mrs. Collins, but then she thought that would be unwise. Mrs. Collins was so peevish and narrow-minded that she misconstrued everything, including Brand's attentions and intentions. "I guess you won't be needing me as a chaperone much longer," she had said a few days ago and Jane was so enraged at the remark that she felt as if she could chastise her. But Mrs. Collins would have been fully able to avert such a catastrophe. No one had ever found such a thoughtful father to the deed with her; not even dear James.

No Jane was powerless. She had to have a chaperon and her neighbor was the only one she could trust. Despite Mrs. Collins' proclivities for gossip, she felt that she could trust her, for in such little intrigues as this the good woman was exactly in her own element. So Jane's expression of regret had been confined to harsh words that brought tears and apologies and a reconciliation.

She dressed hurriedly now in the irrepressible blue serge and started for New York alone. On her way to the car she stopped suddenly in front of her grocery. The monthly account there remained unsettled. An idea occurred to her. Perhaps her plan for revenging herself on the butcher hadn't been so visionary after all. Why not awe the grocer by revealing the prosperous state of her finances and forestall another scene with Bob. She was sure the man could find no way of telling her husband that she had presented a hundred dollar bill. Besides, Bob seldom went into the place.

She entered with a cheerful "Good morning," to which the merchant responded with a salutation not quite so cordial. He was thinking of $17.43 and of the fact that it was seven days past the first of the month. But her next words brought such a metamorphosis of manner that Jane smiled in spite of herself.

"I want to pay the bill, Mr. Nolte," she informed him. "I neglected to bring it with me. Would you mind looking it up?"

He wouldn't mind at all and although the figures were quite vividly impressed on his mind he went through the pretense of examining his books and presently told her the amount. She held out the yellowback, at which Mr. Nolte's host store smile broadened, then waned and finally vanished into a blank stare of hopeless disappointment. He didn't have the change. It was so early in the day, he told her, but if she didn't mind waiting for a minute or so he would have Fritz mind the store while he tried to break the bill at Mr. Hoffenbach's across the way. But she did mind. She was in an awful hurry. She had an appointment in the city and was late now. Of course, tomorrow would do, he reluctantly admitted and he proceeded with much alacrity and renewed amiability to take a substantial order that she found time to give.

Jane left the store in high spirits. Money was indeed power. She opened her purse and looked at the bill again while she waited for the car. The sight of it thrilled her. Oh, why was there any such thing as poverty? Here in this little strip of crisp paper was the key to life's real joys; it pointed the route and paved the way to escape from the bitter confines of her impecunious past. She had never a thought that it was not rightfully hers; that she had not earned it. She knew only that she had it. So the gambler, when he has won another man's money, revels in thoughts of how he will squander it and is buoyed up to the heights of all moral obliquity and freedom from care.

of the big Sixth avenue stores. These were her rightful domain, or had been when she had gone to spend the few dollars that her own limited resources allowed. She rode now to one of the more exclusive Fifth avenue shops and proceeded to make such purchases as she wanted without regard to cost. The more she paid the better, for her plan of concealment would not permit of her buying too much, and, besides, she was through with the cheap and shabby.

Everything in this store catered to the better tastes of the better class of people. Even the girls behind the counters were different. They were polite and suave, softer voiced and gentler mannered. None of them showed gum and none of them called "cash" in shrill, repellent tones. Nor did any of them carry on a conversation with a companion 50 feet away to inform her friend that she had had a "perfectly swell time last night" and contemplated spending the evening with "Jimmie" instead of being confined at the skating rink.

Meet of the floorwalkers were in keeping with the clerks. They were not dressed in long Prince Alberts as for an afternoon tea, nor did they twirl huge black mustaches. They were clean shaven and neat, and stood or walked about with some display of modesty as if they thought it possible that some of their millionaire customers erg were almost as elevated in life's station as themselves.

Here was a house in order and Jane reveled in it. No more Sixth avenue for her; she would leave that to Mrs. Collins. For herself she was through with the hot pelot. She was not one of them and never had been except from necessity. She thought of her home in one of the larger cities upstate and of her life there when Bob had courted her five years ago. Her father was not rich, as wealth is regarded today, but he was a well-to-do and much respected attorney and an intellectual one. If the occasion had required it he would have taken lodging at a first-class hotel and done without a meal rather than stay at an inferior one.

Jane had had a year at one of the leading colleges for girls and then a turn in the tide of her father's business affairs had cut short this luxury. But she knew her art and her music and who had looked forward with a thrill and with wholesome anticipation to her advent in the great metropolis.

She had an inkling of Bob's business then and business of any kind seemed better for a man to her than a profession. Her father's case convinced her of this. She was sure that no man was more capable, more suited to enjoy the best things of life or more eager to supply them for his family, but his calling did not seem to provide the means.

SCOTSDALE HANDS GAME TO FEDERALS IN NINTH

Errors and Baseless Plays Result in 4-3 Victory for Pittsburgh.

All Runs in Last Inning.
After leading the Pittsburgh Federals 3 to 0 until the ninth inning yesterday, the Scottdale Independents went in the air and allowed their opponents to score four runs and win the game in the final round. It was a heart-breaking finish in that the victors' runs were made up the worst kind of baseless plays.

Roberts got on in the ninth on a double by Bell, who then threw wild. A first, Roberts continuing to second. LaCasse singled, advancing Roberts, and Simon doubled over second base, putting in the run and advancing LaCasse. Rogers' single scored last pair. Adams fanned, then LaCasse singled to center. Watson made a good return but LaCasse intercepted it and though Rogers had
